INEC GUIDELINES FOR ELECTION OBSERVATION
FOREWORD

May I on behalf of the Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC) and the people of Nigeria welcome you to the 2011 General Elections. These elections take place in the 50th year of Nigeria’s Independence and are a serious test of the strength of the country’s commitment to elective government.

Every Nigerian voter is entitled to lawfully express his or her choice through the ballot and to have this choice counted and respected. INEC, under my leadership, is committed to ensuring that every lawful vote counts in the 2011 General Elections.

In ensuring that we attain this goal, INEC welcomes the support of all people and partners of goodwill, including election Observers.

The Commission has been making elaborate preparations to ensure that the 2011 General Elections are credible. We have the technology to improve the electoral process including electronic registration for voters with the help of Direct Data Capturing Machines (DCMs). Every effort has been made to ensure that electoral officials are persons of good character who are well trained. We have worked to ensure efficient distribution of election materials.

INEC will encourage Observers to verify the success and limitations of these arrangements. While INEC is the only body legally empowered to monitor elections in Nigeria, Observers are essential in verifying that voters exercise their franchise in an environment of freedom and fairness, free from coercion, intimidation or violence. They are also to witness whether or not the results announced fairly reflect the votes counted.

INEC has made arrangements for proper and efficient accreditation of Observers to facilitate their ease of movement around the country before, during and after, the elections. A Unit has been created to liaise with and ensure hitch-free accreditation and facilitation for Observers.

These Guidelines reflect the standards of Nigeria’s Electoral Act as well as the minimum standards for election observation which Nigeria subscribes to as a sovereign member of the international community.

Once again I welcome you as you observe Nigeria vote.

PROFESSOR ATTahiru JEGA
Chairman INEC.

A. What is election Observation?

Election observation is the process whereby elections in a particular country or locality are observed against set standards by an independent and impartial body of Observers with the aim of identifying whether the elections conform to accepted guarantees of democratic participation, identifying flaws and challenges, and also making recommendations on how the process can be improved in the future. In simplified terms election observation includes four main activities, namely to:

1. Observe processes and activities organised during elections

2. Collate facts and observations;

3. Interpret the facts gathered against the laws governing elections as well as basic democratic standards, in order to see whether or not the elections meet the threshold of credibility as defined by law and accepted by the international community; and

4. Outline the findings so collated and the interpretation based on them in a document or report.

Election is a process and not an event. To that extent, election observation should cover all the activities undertaken in connection with the election. A credible election is not just premised on events of the Election Day. It is also based on the legal framework, prevailing political environment, respect for individual rights and internal party structures and collaboration among all the actors in the electoral process.

Several election-related activities typically precede and follow voting. Activities that precede voting include constituency delineation, party primary and candidate selection processes, registration of voters, campaigning, distribution of voting materials and management of distribution logistics, training and accreditation of election workers, including party agents, etc. All these impact on the outcome of election and are as important as the election proper. After voting, there is usually counting and tallying of votes, collation and declaration of results.
If these activities are conducted diligently with fairness, independence and even-handedness by the electoral umpire, the parties, candidates and Observers are likely to regard the elections as credible, free and fair and the likelihood of legal challenge to the announced results will be severely minimised, if not eliminated entirely. Most times elections are won and lost before Election Day. Many electoral malpractices capable of determining the results of elections are also mostly committed before or after Election Day.

Therefore, election observation should ideally focus on the whole electoral processes. However, such an approach has immense cost implications and most Observers focus on the Election Day seeing it as a reflection of how the electoral process has evolved. To that extent, it represents a reasonable point of engagement and this guideline focuses mainly on observing the voting and result collation process. However, Observers would be well advised to pool resources in order to enable them to follow those activities that precede and follow balloting which may affect their overall assessment of the elections.

Furthermore, a primary focus of election observation is whether the elections are carried out substantially in accordance with the rules and regulations that are prescribed by law in the country in which they take place. However, election observation is not limited to this, as it also seeks to compare these national laws against international standards to ensure that they conform to basic thresholds of democratic elections as accepted by the international community. Such observation will also take into account the performance of the election managers, the level of independence given to them by law and also the attitude of the government in enforcing the election law and maintaining law and order. All these will offer an Observer a clear picture of the quality of the election process.

Elect ion observation and Elect ion Monitoring:

These two terms have been used interchangeably. However there is a fundamental difference between the two. An election monitor is an integral part of the election management structure and has a role in the administration of the election.
In Nigeria, only the Independent National Election Commission (INEC) and its duly authorised personnel are empowered to monitor elections. An Observer on the other hand does not have any role in the administration of the election nor any control or oversight functions. To further simplify these points:

- An election monitor exercises some level of lawful authority over the conduct of elections as well as over officials involved; an Observer has no such powers.

- In Nigeria, a monitor must be a duly authorised personnel of the INEC; an Observer is independent and reports only to his or her organisation

- A monitor can issue instructions and take decisions on behalf of INEC and to that extent would ordinarily possess a greater technical knowledge of the election process than an Observer.

- To enable them fulfil their functions effectively, INEC is responsible for training election monitors on election administration. The training of election Observers is the responsibility of the organisations that deploy them.

- The roles, powers and functions of monitors are created and regulated and the authority so exercised is clearly spelt out by law

It is important to clarify these differentiations. Attempts by Observers to overreach the ambit of their brief have in most cases resulted into misunderstanding and confusion. It is important to emphasise once again that under Nigerian law, it is only the INEC that has authority to monitor elections.

B. Why Observe Elections?

Elections are the means through which the people exercise their sovereign right to choose who governs them and what the political and other priorities of their government should be. Democratic elections are thus the opportunity for the people to express their sovereignty through the ballot to confer legitimacy to their government, renew its mandate if necessary or withdraw from it the authority to govern. This is the basis of accountable government.

The task of accomplishing this goal lawfully is a collective duty shared by the government, voters, candidates, and the international community.

Election observation is in part an expression of international solidarity with communities going through this process and also a way of ensuring that there is credible evidence on the basis of which to evaluate, assess and report on the credibility of the elections in terms of whether they meet the minimum thresholds of democratic participation.

Election observation is undertaken in order to provide an impartial and accurate assessment of the nature of election processes for the benefit of the population of the country where the election is held. It provides opportunity for constructive criticism and engagement of election process to ensure improved performance in future elections. It is an expression of interest in protecting and promoting of common democratic values by organisations and governments who provide Observers.

It is important to observe elections because election observation:

- Provides information on the bases of which an election process can be analysed
- Beam the spotlight on the electoral process and discourages malpractices
- It is a learning process and provides comparative information to assist other countries in improving their electoral process
- Helps the observed state to identify mistakes and recognise progress
- Reinforces common standards and universal benchmarks on what elections should be; and
- Enhances transparency and reinforces the integrity and credibility of the election process.
C. Who is an Observer?

For the purposes of these Guidelines, an Observer is a person sponsored by an organisation and accredited by INEC to observe elections within the guidelines established by INEC. An Observer may be sponsored by local, international or organisation. INEC will not accredit as an observer an individual who is not part of or affiliated with any organisation.

D. Types of Observers

There are two main types of Observers; Local and International Observers.

Local Observers are those sponsored by civil society organisations located, formed or based in Nigeria and whose activities are regulated by Nigerian law. It is desirable that the deployment of local Observer teams should have national coverage. Local Observer groups are encouraged to collaborate, pool resources and share burdens. To facilitate this objective, INEC has concluded a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with a coalition of major local Observer groups in Nigeria. Local Observer organisations that are not yet part of this coalition are encouraged to sign up to the MOU by indicating in writing to the INEC acceptance of its terms and provisions.

International Observers are Observers deployed by or under the authority of intergovernmental agencies, international organisations and other NGOs not domiciled in Nigeria.

E. What to Observe:

An Observer has an obligation to know exactly what to observe and what is important. Election observation is not about seeking for fault but an objective assessment of the election process. At the minimum, it requires adequate appreciation of the electoral laws, rules, procedures and processes of the electoral system that is to be observed. It is important for a prospective Observer to study the field manuals for election officials and also have an idea of the enabling laws and a baseline understanding of the political system that is being observed.

It is necessary for Observers to participate in any briefing by the INEC and use the opportunity to seek any clarification they may require.

Most organisations have a checklist of what to look out for. However, we have taken to liberty to provide an indicative list of what an Observer should concentrate on in the course of observing elections, as follows:

(a) The legal and institutional framework
(b) The electoral/political environment
(c) Arrangements affecting the safety and security of election officials, voters and other participants;
(d) Management of electoral logistics and distribution of electoral materials;
(e) The integrity of the electoral preparations, including voter registration and voter education;
(f) The degree of political competitiveness;
(g) The inclusiveness of the electoral system, civic education and the extent of citizen participation;
(h) The extent of human rights violations and election-related violence;
(i) Evidence of any violence, intimidation, interference with private exercise of the franchise;
(j) The professionalism of security agencies;
(k) The extent to which security has affected the participation of the people in the electoral process;
(l) The conduct of the main institutions and agencies: do they act in a mature and responsible manner?
(m) The integrity of the conduct of the poll, including voting, the count, collation, and declaration of result;
(n) The resolution of electoral disputes

The list here is not exhaustive but merely a guide to what should occupy the attention and interest of an Observer.
Criteria for Accreditation:

Accreditation is the process by which INEC verifies and formally authorises the deployment of an Observer. It is a condition precedent before any organisation or individual can observe elections in Nigeria. INEC is the only body that can accredit election Observers.

No other entity is authorised under Nigerian law to accredit election Observers and any person or authority outside INEC that purports to do so acts unlawfully.

Accreditation confers official recognition and gives the observers access to the locations where voting or balloting, counting, collation and announcement of results take place.

All international observers are to apply for accreditation at the INEC Head office in Abuja not later than 30 days before the elections in which they seek to be Observers.
Local observers can apply for accreditation at the INEC Head Office in Abuja or through the offices of INEC in their various states or Federal Capital Territory as the case may be not later than 21 days before the elections in which they seek to be observers.

INEC will only receive and process applications from organisations or institutions. Applications from unaffiliated individuals seeking to be accredited as observers will not be processed.

An application for accreditation as observer shall fulfil and be accompanied by the following:

(a) An application letter addressed to the Chairman of INEC to be submitted to the appropriate office of INEC at least 21 days before the election in the case of local observers or, in the case of an application by a foreign observer, at least 30 days before the election;

(b) A copy of the organisation’s observation checklist;

(c) The names and contact telephone numbers of all prospective observers to be sponsored or deployed by the organisation. Where such names are not available at the time of the application, the organisation shall indicate a date, not later than ten working days before the elections, by which it shall submit to INEC the names and contact telephone numbers of all its Observers.

- May, within practicable limits, request to inspect and verify election materials.
- May visit any polling station under the direction of the supervising officers of the mission to observe voting and counting.
- Meet with members or staff of the electoral commission, candidates or their agents, voters, representatives of civil society or members of the public or community in order to gather information.
- Ask questions on voting and counting process from members of electoral commission and from superior electoral commission, but does not have the right to countermand a decision of the election officials.
- Should, unless already knowledgeable about these, apprise himself or herself of any relevant information about the community in which he or she will be deployed as an Observer.
- At all times, Observers are advised to ensure that they do not take actions capable of endangering themselves or other participants in the electoral process.

INEC shall:

- Ensure that Observers receive adequate information concerning the arrangements for the elections;
- Designate at the Headquarters in Abuja and in all the State offices, an officer or unit with responsibility for liaison with Observers;
- Not be responsible for securing entry clearance for international Observers or ensuring compliance with immigration requirements for international travel into Nigeria.
- Not be responsible for the personal safety and security of Observers. Observers are advised to direct any inquiries concerning security arrangements to the appropriate security agencies. If in doubt, such inquiries should be directed to the appropriate State Command of the Nigeria Police Force or the office of the Inspector-General of Police in Abuja.

Code of Conduct for Observers:

Election observation is very sensitive work. Accordingly, Observers must conduct themselves responsibly. INEC expects that organisations have codes of conduct and will make every diligent effort to familiarise Observers sponsored by them with their codes. However, we have synthesized below a set of ethical principles that will guide the conduct of election Observers drawing from the African Union Principles, ECOWAS Guidelines and Declaration of Principles for International Observers, endorsed by various inter-governmental and international organisations. These guidelines apply to both local and international Observers:

(a) An election Observer shall respect the sovereignty of the Nigerian people to establish their own government as well as the fundamental rights guarantees contained in the Nigerian Constitution enabling citizens of Nigeria to vote and be voted for in exercise of this sovereignty.

(b) Observers shall respect the laws of the host country and the authority of the bodies charged with the administering the electoral process. Observers must follow any lawful instruction from the country’s governmental, security and electoral officials. Observers also must maintain a respectful attitude towards electoral officials and other national authorities.

(c) Observers shall abide by these Guidelines and any other terms of reference or instructions given to them by their organisation.

(d) Observer organisations shall attend all INEC briefings to which they are invited, familiarize themselves with the applicable laws, ensure that they transmit information from such briefings and laws to all deployed Observers and carefully adhere to the methodologies employed by their observation mission.

(e) Observers shall also report to the leadership of their organisation any conflict of interest or any improper conduct by other Observers who are part of their mission.

(f) Observers shall maintain strict impartiality in the conduct of their duties and will not at any time, publicly express or exhibit any bias or preference in relation to national authorities, parties, candidates or with reference to any issue in contention in the election process.

(g) Observers shall undertake their duties in an unobtrusive manner and will not knowingly or wilfully interfere in the electoral process. Nothing in these guidelines removes the right of the Observers to bring irregularities to the attention of the election officers but they must not give instructions or countermand the election officers.

(h) Observers shall base their conclusions on their personal observation or clear and convincing fact. Conclusions should not be based on or drawn from speculations, hearsay or exclusively from media or internet-based report that the Observer has not personally verified.

(i) Observers shall not prejudge the election outcome.

(j) Observers shall display identification provided by INEC at all times during election duties and must provide other forms of identification if required or requested for by any national authority

(k) Observers shall refrain from making any personal comments to the media on what they observed during elections before the election observation mission makes their statement.

(l) Observers shall not accept any gift or favours that might influence their work.
(m) Observers shall at all times, during the period of observation, including during private time away from work, exercise sound judgment and display a high level of personal discretion.

(n) Observers shall not attempt to take part in the actual administration of the election.
(o) Observers shall not attempt to play active role in resolving disputes or complaints to avoid the possibility of compromising the Observer group’s eventual position on the matter.

(p) Observers must not take any unnecessary or undue risk. Each Observer’s personal safety overrides all other consideration.

(q) Observers are responsible for their safety and security.

(r) Observers do not enjoy immunity from prosecution or criminal responsibility for electoral offences or any other offences recognized under the laws of the Federal Republic of Nigeria.

(s) Observers must be very careful and exercise utmost sense of discretion in their choice of words in describing the elections.

(t) Any Observer who flouts these guidelines may have his or her accreditation cancelled and in the case of an act that constitutes an offence under Nigerian laws, such a person may be prosecuted.

Responsibilities of Observers

a) Organisations applying for accreditation for Observer teams shall bear the costs associated with organising and deploying its monitoring mission and teams.

b) It is the duty of International election Observers and their sponsoring organisations to make their travel plans and fulfil the necessary immigration requirements necessary for obtaining entry clearance to visit Nigeria. Local Observers shall also be responsible for transporting their Observers to the respective polling centres where they will be deployed.

c) INEC shall not play any role in the deployment of Observers save for basic information which may be required for such deployment (e.g., a map of polling stations)

d) It is the duty of the election Observer to arrange adequate logistics support. INEC shall not provide logistical assistance to Observers whether in cash or kind
e) Under no circumstances should Observers handle election documents in the polling station or physically assist the voting or counting process;
f) Each Observer on election observation duty shall be bound to:
• Introduce himself or herself to the polling officer, collation or other officer responsible for the centre or duty station when they arrive. Establishing a working relationship with the electoral officers will assist observation, and is particularly important for the count;
• Comply with the instructions of officials at the polling stations unless such instructions are manifestly unlawful. Any Observer who is dis-satisfied with the official instructions should record the circumstances of such dis-satisfaction in the appropriate observation report;
• Avoid confrontation with election officers, security personnel,
and party agents;
• Be prepared to present proof of accreditation to electoral and security personnel who request them. Observers must keep these documents with them at all times. However, because elections can sometimes be unpredictable, Observers are advised to keep the originals of their identity documents separate from accreditation documents and only carry the accreditation documents while in the field;
• Maintain complete impartiality at all times;
• Avoid conduct or communication capable of disrupting the voting and counting process;
• Be prepared to make records of conversations and comments, ask questions and, in particular ask for concrete examples when general statements are made;
• Not attempt to take an active role in resolving any disputes or complaints, even if asked to. Their role is to observe and record events at the polling stations. However, Observers may record any complaints made to them on the appropriate observation form, including details of the complaints; including the name, organization (where relevant) and contacts of those involved;
• Be conscious that their conduct is likely to be closely observed and should, therefore, try not to be too enthusiastic or overtly friendly when meeting candidates, their proxies or representatives whether or not there is prior familiarity with such persons; and • Have a deployment plan for the polling units or stations to be covered during and what tasks to accomplish at each unit and try not to give the impression of rushing from one polling station to another without a plan.

Responsibilities of INEC

The Independent National Electoral Commission recognises that it owes some responsibility to the Observers to ensure an effective observation exercise and that election observation can only be achieved if INEC and the Observers work together. To this end INEC undertakes to:

a) Provide all the necessary assistance to enable international Observers to sufficiently prepare and fulfil immigration requirement to do their observation work;
b) Issue invitation letters to international Observer missions which comply with the conditions for accreditation;
c) Guarantee unimpeded access to Observers to all the stages and process of the election;
d) Guarantee reasonable access to all persons concerned with election process who are within the authority of INEC; and
e) Guarantee that the election Observers shall have access to all INEC literature and instructions on the elections

Report of Observers

Certain basic principles are expected of the report to be released by Observers (both interim and final report). Some of these include the following:

1. Care must be taken in the use of language suggesting negative/positive assessment of the elections, such as ‘free and fair’, ‘fraud’, ‘rigging’, ‘flawed’ and ‘irregular(ity)’. As much as INEC recognises the right of Observers to make their respective assessments, such determinations should be done with utmost discretion and responsibility. Any conclusions reached must be supported by clear factual evidence.

2. Performance lapses and genuine mistakes should be separated from deliberate wrongdoing. Any acts suggesting unlawful conduct or clear wrong doing by electoral officials should be documented as clearly as possible and forwarded to the INEC headquarters for the attention of the Chairman.

3. The Observation report should be a product of careful assessment of the frequency, pattern, distribution and effect of any occurrences. In particular, irregularities must be carefully examined to determine their probable overall effect on electoral outcome.

4. Care should be taken not to include in the report unproven allegations or unconfirmed incidents. If, however, it is considered necessary in any report to include unconfirmed incidents, the report should clearly state that such incidents are unconfirmed as well as indicating any efforts made to secure confirmation.

5. Reports should be structured in a logical manner.
APPENDIX 1:
POLITICAL AND ELECTORAL SYSTEM

Nigeria is a federation comprising 36 States and one Federal Capital Territory (FCT), Abuja and 774 Local Government Areas. INEC conducts elections for executive and legislative positions in Federal and State government. In addition, INEC is also responsible for conducting elections into the Area Councils in the Federal Capital Territory of Abuja.

Elections into local government councils in the 36 States of Nigeria are conducted by the State Independent Electoral Commissions which are outside of INEC’s authority.

1.1 EXECUTIVE OFFICES

For each election, the country is divided into constituencies With respect to positions in the executive arm of government the entire country is treated as one constituency for the Presidential election and the Chairman of INEC is statutorily designated as the Chief Electoral Officer in Presidential Elections. Each of the 36 States constitutes a constituency for the purpose of elections into the offices of the governors at the State level. Each Area Council in the FCT is also treated as a constituency for the purpose of electing an Area Council Chairman.

Nigeria’s 1999 Constitution prescribes the conditions that candidates must fulfil in order to be declared winners in an election into an executive office. These conditions are as follows:

1.1(a) PRESIDENT

A person is duly elected as president, where if there are more than one candidates, he or she scores a majority of votes as well as at least one-quarter of the votes cast in each of two third of the states of the federation. Where, however, there is only one candidate, he must obtain a majority of YES votes over NO votes as well as not less than one-quarter of the votes cast at the election in each of at least two-thirds of all states in the country and the Federal Capital Territory.
1.1(b) RUN-OFF (1\textsuperscript{st} and 2\textsuperscript{nd})

In default of a candidate being elected as stated in paragraph (a) above, a second election run-off shall be held within seven days as follows:-

(i) Election between the candidate that scores the highest number of votes and another with highest majority of votes in the highest number of states. Where there is more than one candidate with the highest number of states, the candidate with the highest total votes among them shall be second candidate.

(ii) A failure of either of the candidates to meet the majority of votes and score of over a quarter of votes cast in each of at least two third of all the states and FCT, winner at two third and last run-off elections shall be the candidate who scores the majority of votes cast in the election.

1.1(c) GOVERNOR

A person is elected Governor, where, if there are two or more candidates, he secures a majority of votes in addition to one-quarter of the votes cast in each of at least two-thirds of all the Local Government Areas of the state. However, in the case of single candidates, to be elected a Governor, the candidate must score a majority of YES votes over NO votes cast in a minimum of two-thirds of all at the Local Government Areas in the state.

1.1(d) RUN-OFF(S) (1\textsuperscript{st} and 2\textsuperscript{nd})

The failure of a single candidate to be elected, results in fresh nominations. In the case of more than one candidate there shall be a run-off election between the candidates who secured the highest number of votes cast and the candidate who secured the majority of votes in the highest number of Local Government Areas. Where those with the highest number of Local Government Areas are more than one, the candidate with the next highest total of votes cast at the election shall be the second candidate. Two other run-offs are organized where there is no clear winner in the first run-off. The candidate with a majority of the votes cast at the third run-offs is elected the Governor of the state.
1.2 LEGISLATIVE OFFICES

INEC also organises elections into legislative positions at the federal and state levels as well as for councillorships of the Area Councils in the FCT. The federal legislature is bi-cameral, comprising a Senate and a House of Representatives.

- The Senate comprises 109 members. Each State of the Federation comprises three Senatorial Zones, each zone being recognised as a separate constituency for purposes of electing one Senator.

- The House of Representatives comprises 360 members elected from 360 federal constituencies. Each State is divided for this purpose into different federal constituencies. Each federal constituency elects or returns one member to the House of Representatives.

- Each State has a House of Assembly as its legislative arm of government. Members of the House of Assembly are elected from State Constituencies which are different and much smaller than federal constituencies.

- In the FCT, for the purpose of fulfilling the legislative functions of local government in the Area Councils, Councillors are elected for each of the Wards. A Ward is a constituency for the purpose of electing a Councillor in the Area Council elections in the FCT.

The legislative candidates become winners the moment they score a simple majority over their opponents. The Executive positions are, however, determined by specific majorities as follows:

1.2(a) NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

The National Assembly shall comprise:

(i) 109 Senators, i.e. three Senators per state while FCT has only one Senator:

(ii) 360 Members of the House of Representatives, representing 360 constituencies delimited according to population “as nearly equal as possible”.

1.2(b)  STATE HOUSES OF ASSEMBLY

There are 990 members of the 36 State House of Assembly. Each member represents a State Constituency.

1.3  CHAIRMAN AND COUNCILLORS IN THE SIX AREA COUNCILS OF FCT, ABUJA

The Federal Capital Territory, Abuja is made up of six Area Councils headed by elected Chairman and Councillors.

The administration of elections to the offices of the Chairmen/Councillors is regulated by the Electoral Act 2010.

2  THE VOTING METHOD

In every election, every voter is entitled to have their vote counted and every vote must count. This INEC continuously strives for ways and means to make the voting method increasingly effective.

The Commission has, therefore, adopted the open-secret ballot system as prescribed by the Electoral Act 2010.

Nigeria has 120,000 polling stations. Each Polling Station is headed by one Presiding Officer and assisted by two Assistant Presiding Officers. This is in addition to the security agencies and political party agents who must be in every polling station. Supervisory Presiding Officers are engaged to supervise 10 No. polling stations. At the close of voting, the Presiding Officer counts the votes in the presence of party agents and the results made public in each polling station, before being transmitted to the collation centres for collation before formal declaration.

• Elections must be organized on the dates or at the periods fixed by the electoral law.

• Women have equal rights with men to vote and be voted for, and to hold public office at all levels of governance.

• A reliable voters list must be produced, drawing upon a reliable registry of births and deaths.

II. PRINCIPLES OF DEMOCRATIC ELECTIONS

1. Democratic elections are the basis of the authority of any representative government;
2. Regular elections constitute a key element of the democratization process and therefore, are essential ingredients for good governance, the rule of law, the maintenance and promotion of peace, security, stability and development;

3. The holding of democratic elections is an important dimension in conflict prevention, management and resolution;

4. Democratic elections should be conducted:

- Freely and fairly;
- Under democratic constitutions and in compliance with supportive legal instruments;
- Under a system of separation of powers that ensures in particular, the independence of the judiciary;
- At regular intervals, as provided for in National Constitutions; e. by impartial, all-inclusive competent accountable electoral institutions staffed by well-trained personnel and equipped with adequate logistics;

III. RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE MEMBER STATES

We commit our Governments to:
